Are you a declared IR major interested in completing a major independent research project, developing a close relationship with a faculty advisor, and graduating with honors? If so, join us at an information session to learn more about the Honors Program in International Relations. Our program is interdisciplinary and enables students to pursue a wide variety of research projects. Students can elect to work with faculty throughout the university, and will be equipped with the professional “tools” to undertake their own independent research, analyze the findings, and write a final research thesis.

Read about this year’s group of IR Honors Students: internationalrelations.stanford.edu/people/honors-students

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 15
10:00 – 11:00 a.m.
Encina Hall West, Room 219
Breakfast will be served

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 20
1:30 – 2:30 p.m.
Encina Hall West, Room 219
Lunch will be served

Applications are available online at: internationalrelations.stanford.edu/degrees/honors

Accepting applications January 21 – February 28, 2019

Decisions will be made within one week of application. If you have any questions, please contact Erica Gould, IR Honors Director, at: egould@stanford.edu